

Perfect Prom Date

Prom is a night that everyone wants to be perfect, and who you go with needs to be perfect too. Who you choose as your date holds a lot more weight than most think. There are things, when choosing a date; you need to look for in the person.

Attention Hogs:

Who wants to be with someone who is always in the spotlight no matter what is going on? Well, not me. Prom night is a night more for girls than guys, let's go ahead and face it. The girls prepare for this night months in advanced and of course they want everyone to be looking at them, not their date. Being funny and sociable is one thing, but when you can't even get a word in because your date is being obnoxious and annoying then that's where I would draw the line. I want people to talk to me too. You want him to talk, be active within the group, and talk to you as well. Technically, the girls should be in the spotlight because they actually care more about it than the average guy. Guys basically just go because they don't want to hear their girlfriend complain about it. Clingy:

It's nice when your date wants to be all about you and actually cares about you on this special night, but when he is a little too much into you, to me, that's not going to work. When you can't even dance or leave his sight without him being all over you, then that's not a good thing. Being nice and giving the attention that every girl wants is good enough; just don't over do it. To all you guys, show the girl that you care, but don't over do it.

Sweethearts:

These are the best of the guys. Every girl wants a guy to be perfect. As we all know, there is no such thing as a "prince charming," but there are some out there that come pretty close. Pick the guy that is laid back but still shows that he cares. Pick someone who will open the car door for you, is nervous so bad that they're shaking when they put on your corsage, and doesn't complain about all those dreadful pictures you have to take before the prom starts. Your night will be so much better if you find a guy like this. There are not many of them out there, so pick them while they're still available.
