So you are finally in high school. Here in high school there are a lot of things you need to get use to because things run differently up here. So here are some tips to make your freshman year a little easier.

First off, get to class. Always have someone to walk with to class. This cuts down on the number of times you get lost because it will happen. And always be on time for class because being tardy is never good, and after a number of them you will be coming to school early for BSD.

Now that you are in class, PAY ATTENTION! You might have heard this a million times, but it is the truth. If you have to move away from your friends to pay attention, then do it. It might seem like a dumb idea, but your grades are very important if you plan on going to college. Do your work and homework, it helps you understand the material more and it helps bring your grades up.

Tests are a big part of your grade in most classes, so don't be lazy and not study. You will regret it in the long run. Take some time everyday to study, that way you are not cramming on the day before a test. There is no way to avoid it; your teachers will assign you big assignments. So, do not procrastinate. It is a bad habit, and a hard one to break.

Friends. Most likely you will not have every class with your best friends from middle school. High school is about change. Make as many friends as possible because you never know when you will need help for something or just someone to hang out with.

And Freshmen do not think you are the best at everything because in high school you will soon realize you are not. The sooner you learn this, the better. Upperclassmen are bigger, stronger, tougher, smarter, and better looking than you may ever be. Get over it.
