Rodney Kay, assistant principal at Heard County High School, was announced as a finalist for the 2010 Assistant Principal of the Year by the Georgia Association of Secondary School Principals (GASSP). The Assistant Principal of the Year recognition program is sponsored by Horace Mann and the National Association of Secondary School Principals (NASSP). The program recognizes assistant principals that excel in developing self and others, community service, resolving complex problems, and educational leadership.

School administrators across Georgia are very proud of these finalists that portray excellent qualities to those around them. When asked why he thought he was chosen for recognition with this award, Kay stated, "Because of a little golden rule that I get the opportunity to teach elementary students every Sunday morning. I think the reason can be summed up with this rule:

order then people should be able to see the "JOY" in your life. May sound funny, but that's it. I always try to put the needs of our students and teachers before my own needs. Tough to do it all the time, but very rewarding when I'm able to accomplish it!"

Kay is among three other finalists in this competition, including Cindy Bennet of Lee Middle School in Coweta County, Brenda Thomas of Veterans Middle School in Columbus, and Kemberly Williams of Morgan County Middle School, to represent Georgia for NASSP National Assistant Principal of the Year. All four of the finalists will go through an interview at the GASSP Fall Conference. The conference will be held this month at the Mountain Conference is located near the main office on the first floor. The room number is 127 and can be found on the hall leading to the commons area. Hanging in the window of the store are a few of items available for purchase.

There are many articles of clothing and other accessories to choose from. Among these are maroon, grey and white polo's with three different breast pocket designs. Regular short sleeved and long sleeved t-shirts can be found with newer and older patterns. One innovative design, favored by Heard High's receptionist, Lori Cabe, extends down the left front side of the shirt "like a sewn in spirit ribbon." To keep warm during the colder
