

Don't Eat Yellow Snow

By Hannah Burson

People these days are always trying to impress the person beside them by comparing what they look like or what they are wearing. I have seen some girls and even some guys dress different ways that are not very "easy on the eyes" if you know what I mean. Muffin tops and turkey-flab arms will never be considered attractive and probably should be covered for those of us who don't want to lose our lunch. So this month I am giving advice on how I think people should dress and why. No, I do not think you must go out and buy a whole new wardrobe just because I am writing this article, but there might some things you have never thought about and maybe even ought to consider.

Stuck in the younger years: I think there are millions of beautiful women in the world today. Although sometimes, my eyes stop focusing on their gorgeous face and get stuck on their bad dressing abilities. It is not flashy at all when you are out shopping just trying to have a nice time with some friends and you see some forty year old lady wearing the same outfit Miley Cyrus was wearing at the Kid's Choice Awards the night before. Women these days get caught up in what the younger generation looks like that they simply forget that their days of all that glam are over. I have even seen women that look about forty or forty-five go straight to the junior's section and buy themselves an outfit.

Size does matter: Some people buy their outfits two sizes too small. I admit, if I was bigger, I would want to look skinnier by buying jeans that I knew would not fit even before I took it off the rack. That is not the way you want to be looked at by the world, because people think that you are just being trashy. It is okay to be a little bigger than what you would like to be. Make a goal for yourself. Buy some jeans that you know there is no way you are going to fit in. Then exercise and eat healthy until you can fit into them. You will feel more energized, gorgeous, and satisfied about your figure. Even though you are larger, that does not mean that you need to buy the hottest pair of skinny jeans in stores. I know you think you look skinner, but in reality, those skinny jeans just show the world how much larger you are. You can dress pretty but modest at the same time.

Pull them things up: Some guys dress with their pants at their knees. Sometimes I wonder if they could even keep their pants up if they did not hold them the whole time they are walking, not to mention running. What is the point? Are these guys trying to show the world their backside? If you need a belt, they have them at Dollar

General just down the road. I see no point in it. It looks kind of tiring to me. I would not want to have to hold up my pants all day just to get around. I do not see how some of these guys do not trip. It does not look very good when you are walking around showing off your "junk in the trunk" when most guys do not have anything to see anyways.
