It is almost Halloween, and we are not little kids anymore so there really isn't any significance of the day. However, many of us like to get scared, so instead of just sitting around being bored on Halloween, watch a horror movie. I mean it will definitely kill some time, and will keep your mind off of all the candy that you didn't get. I took it upon myself to find five very spooky movies that are sure to give you the chills that night. My list is based on movies I have seen, and other people's reactions to the movie. My top picks are:

The Exorcist: This movie, The Exorcist, is based on a true event that happened in the United States in the late 1940s to a little boy. In this movie, there is a little girl named Regan, who starts having fits, and is prone to strange behaviors. When Regan become completely unmanageable, her mother calls in a priest. The priest is convinced that the girl is possessed by the devil, and says that they need to call an exorcist. They call one, and he comes to the young girl. When they try to get the demon out of the girl, both priest, and the girl face many horrors.

The Ring 2: The Ring Two is the sequel of The Ring. In this movie a single mother, Rachel Keller, moves out of her original hometown to Seattle, hoping to forget all the terrifying events that happened in the first movie. Once she gets there, she gets a job for a local newspaper, where she learns about an unexplained murder of a boy after he watched a certain video with his girlfriend. After that she begins to wonder if her past is catching up with her, so she begins looking into it, and finds that the other-worldly, Samara, has come back, and is up to the same tricks again. Rachel must fight to get rid of the thing that has been haunting her for years.

The Unborn: This movie is about a nineteen year old girl who is being haunted by a ghost of a boy who was killed brutally in Auschwitz. Casey Beldon notices that a ghost begins stalking her every day.

Determined to make this come to a stop, she seeks spiritual advice from her priest, Rabbi Sendak. They look into her family background, and alarmingly they discover her family has a family curse. Casey must fight to put a stop to this creature, that only she can stop it.

The Haunting in Connecticut: This movie is based on true events. It all starts off when a family has to relocate closer to a clinic, where their teenage son has to go to get cancer treatments. They find a house that seems to be a pretty good deal, and buy it. After they move in, strange things start to happen to the boy. His family just thinks that it is a side effect of the chemo but they soon find that it is not. They find out what happened in the house, and they must try everything in their power to help their son, and save their lives.

House on a Haunted Hill: In this movie, a guy invites five people to a house; all that they have to do is stay the night there without leaving it. Sounds pretty simple, but when strange things start to happen, it gets tougher to not leave. When frightening things start to happen, and things go missing you think that you can leave the house. However, what happens when it will not let you?
